Workshop Dates and Times

Takes participants through 6 activities and allows them to adapt for their own needs and work goals.

Answers the question, "what ways can we actively engage participants"? This workshop takes participants through 6 activities that will give them a chance to adapt and test out for their own work topics or scenarios.

The material in the workshop explores Active Engagement (one of the 5 Pillars) and 5 supporting components.

Behaviourism

Behaviourism focuses on the actions required for change. When applied to facilitating, the facilitator assists the participant in obtaining specific skills and knowledge. This approach is both outcome-oriented and process-oriented. This type of facilitating:

- identifies factors that must be learned for the desired outcome,
- arranges them in a step-by-step, consistent manner.

Workshop Purpose

A workshop built on the foundations of engaging participants where they are at. Facilitating is not about teaching at all. It is about creating the conditions to maximize participant learning and skill / knowledge acquisition. Come be engaged, so that you can spread it in your own way and become more effective in leading team meetings, delivering presentations or facilitating group sessions.

Learning Outcomes:

1. Describe the experience of having one of the Pillars in the Behavioural Facilitation Approach "Active Engagement" used throughout the day
2. Explore different strategies to challenging facilitation situations and gather wisdom from peers
3. Adapt at least one tool or method from six, presented and experienced in the session, for use in your own facilitation
4. Build a network of supportive peers to share and troubleshoot future challenges
